Womick asks for revocation of three city liquor licenses

In a summary statement to the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission, City Atty. John Womick asked for the revocation of the liquor licenses of three of Carbondale's four package liquor stores.

During a commission hearing Monday, Womick said eight specific items link the businesses of W. Stephen, Thomas and Philip Hoffmann and Robert and Thomas Palmier. The Hoffmanns are the owners of record of Eastgate Liquor Mart and ABC Liquor Store, while the Palmiers are owners of record of Leo's Westown Liquor Mart.

The only Carbondale package liquor store not owned by either the Hoffmanns or the Palmiers is Westroad Liquors, located in the Murdale Shopping Center.

Neither Wilbur Pick nor Paul Tucker, owners of record of Westroad Liquor would comment on their potential position as owners of the city's only package store.

Testimony given prior to Womick's summary by W. Stephen Hoffman revealed a $25,000 loan was made by the Hoffmanns to the Palmiers to financially help the latter move their liquor store from South Illinois Avenue to its present location at the Westown Mall.

Hoffmann said the move was intended to help not only the Palmiers, but to benefit the Hoffmann-owned ABC Liquor Store, 109 N. Washington, which before the move was in close competition with the Palmier's store.

A certified public accountant's report on the financial situation of the stores, however, shows only ABC benefited from the move. According to the report, business in the past year has gone up 87 per cent at ABC and down 33 per cent at Leo's.

The hearings, called to take public testimony in the city's investigation of the liquor businesses will continue Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the City Council Chambers.

Brandt: Low pay raises form of taxation

By Matt Coulter
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Low salary increases for University employees amount to a form of selective taxation, President Warren Brandt said Tuesday.

Brandt said most of the responsibility for the low pay increases belongs to Gov. Daniel Walker, and that the size of the pay raises might provide a push for collective bargaining on campus.

Brandt said, "Essentially, employees of the University are being told, 'Even though faculty salary increases this year may average six per cent at private institutions, we're going to take 3.5 per cent off your chance to compete for compensation.' To me, that's taxation."

Faculty and administrative personnel are scheduled to receive average increases of 2.5 per cent, according to a memorandum Brandt issued last week. One per cent increases will be given across-the-board, and increases averaging 1.5 per cent will be distributed through the merit system.

In the memorandum, Brandt blamed the governor for the low salary increases.

"This selective taxation by the executive branch of our state government demeans those who serve the state so well and deprives them of normal earned compensations," Brandt said in the memorandum.

"As I look at it," Brandt said, "the legislature passed a 4.5 per cent increase, still not up to the average, but rather close. The governor, by his personal, single action, cut that back to 2.5 per cent."

Brandt said higher education needs better funding so that state employees would not have to sacrifice salary increases. Higher funding levels for education could result from a tax increase, redistribution of funds, or cutting back on services for state functions, he said.

Brandt said local legislators were helpful in the budget process by replacing some funds which had been cut from the University in Walker's spring budget recommendations.

Walker vetoed all additions to his budget recommendations.

Brandt said SIU's budget was cut in ways "like tuition retention and the inability to use last years' tuition" that other university budgets were not subjected to.

Brandt's memorandum urged SIU faculty and staff to watch the "commitment of candidates with regard to how they intend to meet funding needs of higher education. If you share my concerns, I urge you to express them at election time."

Brandt included the political remarks because he felt the salary increase situation is "not an everyday occurrence." He said students should also examine the candidates views on higher education.

The size of the pay increases may contribute toward the establishment of collective bargaining on campus, Brandt said.

Navy ship carries Americans out of Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—In a smooth operation monitored by President Ford in Washington, a U.S. Navy transport evacuated several hundred Americans and other foreigners from war-torn Lebanon Tuesday and sailed for Greece.

Leaders of the Moslem leftist and Palestinian coalition, meanwhile, considered a Soviet-mediated agreement to resolve their disputes with Syria that has been aiding the Lebanese Christians in the civil war.

Among evacuees taken aboard the 16,900-ton transport ship Coronado was U.S. Ambassador Talcott W. Seelye, whose departure was kept secret until the last minute. The embassy said Seelye had been called to Washington for consultations and would be returning to Beirut.

Palestinian guerrillas and other leftist forces stood guard along the seafloor in Moslem-controlled Beirut during the evacuation.

Seelye later was flown by helicopter from the Coronado to the aircraft carrier U.S.S. America which patrolled off shore with jet planes on alert for the operation.

"It's good to have you out of there," Rear Adm. James Limber, commander of the carrier task force, told Seelye. The ambassador then was flown to a U.S. air base outside Athens en route to Washington.

He expressed optimism that Lebanon's problems would be on the way to a solution within three to six months and added, "I'm looking forward to returning."

An official at the U.S. Embassy said 160 Americans and 390 others signed up to be evacuated but only 400 turned up to board the ship. Observers watching the departure said the number appeared closer to 250 to 300 and in Washington a Pentagon spokesman said 300 were involved. Of this group, he added, about 100 were U.S. citizens, including 25 U.S. government officials.

Among the foreigners remaining behind were some 1,000 American citizens, mostly of Lebanese birth with dual Lebanese and U.S. citizenship.

The U.S. Embassy staff now is down to only 14 persons, including the Marine guards.

The Coronado is the same 6th Fleet ship that rescued Americans and other foreigners from Cyprus during the Greek-Turkish fighting there in July 1974. It brought those evacuees to then peaceful Beirut.

China hit by massive earthquake

WASHINGTON (AP)—The largest earthquake recorded in the world since 1964 rocked the Hopeh Province region in northeast China Tuesday, the U.S. Geological Survey said. The survey said that extensive damage could be expected in the Hopeh Province region. According to preliminary studies, the earthquake registered about 8.2 on the Richter scale, the survey's National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., reported. This is the largest since the earthquake that hit Alaska on Good Friday, March 27, 1964, the center said.

Russian chess champion defects

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP)—Viktor Korchnoi, the world's No. 2 rated chess player, dodged a flight home to the Soviet Union on Tuesday, went to local police headquarters and asked for political asylum in The Netherlands. Korchnoi, ranked next to world champion Anatoly Karpov among players currently competing on the international chess circuit, joins a growing list of Soviet artists and intellectuals who have defected, emigrated, or been sent into exile in the West since the early 1960s.

Natural gas price increase granted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Power Commission (FPC) established new price ceilings for the nation's natural gas Tuesday, handing consumers the prospect of higher gas bills almost immediately. FPC staff studies indicated average residential gas bills would increase by something like 4 to 8 per cent during the next year as a result of the commission's action. The commission estimated that average residential gas bills would be increased about $21.45 in Illinois.

Ex-IBI officials indicted for wiretap

CHICAGO (AP)—Two former superintendents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation were indicted Tuesday by a federal grand jury on charges of illegal wiretapping. Mitchell Ware, now a deputy superintendent of the Chicago police department, and Richard F. Gliebe each were charged with one count of conspiracy. The indictment said that the conspiracy took place between June 1970 and December 1972. Ware was the first superintendent of the agency and Gliebe succeeded Ware as superintendent in 1971.

Hill House permit filing date extended

By Eric White
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

City officials have postponed the deadline for Hill House's application for special use permits to Aug. 6, James Rayfield, director of the city planning division said Tuesday.

Rayfield said the decision was made Tuesday at the request of Paul Reitman, director of Hill House, two residences designed primarily for drug abuse treatment. "I consulted with the city attorney and the city manager and they concurred," Rayfield said.

Reitman said he asked for the extension so that he may confer with the Hill House board of directors on a response to the city's order. Reitman was originally told Hill House had to apply for the permit by Wednesday.

"If the applications are not in by August 6 Friday," Rayfield said, "some sort of action will have to be initiated the following Monday."

The possibility that Hill House may go to court rather than comply with the city's directive was raised by Reitman and Hill House's attorney, R. Corydon Finch, at a City Council meeting Monday night.

Finch said Tuesday that alternatives to compliance include a suit by the city against Hill House, a suit against the city by Hill House, a suit initiated by a third party and a settlement arrived at through discussions with city officials.

Rayfield had originally granted Hill House zoning certificates classifying both its facilities, at 308 W. Cherry St. and 512 S. Beveridge St. as rooming houses.

However, J. Phil Gilbert, assistant city attorney, notified Rayfield Friday that Hill House will have to seek special use permits as a "licensed home or institution which provides for the care or custody or education or welfare of persons."

Reitman had contended that Hill House itself is not licensed although services provided under contract to state agencies are.

In his letter to Rayfield, Gilbert said, "Hill House is licensed by the Dangerous Drug Commission to provide drug abuse treatment."

Gilbert also wrote, "Hill House is also apparently licensed by the Department of Children and Family Services."

Rayfield said Monday that Hill House will have to apply first to the City Planning Commission. The question will then go to the City Council which will hold public hearings before making its decision.

The hearings must be advertised in local newspapers at least once, one-half month before they begin, Rayfield said.

Rayfield said he did not know if Hill House will be forced to move before a decision is made, if an application for the special use permit is received. "I don't imagine they will have to move before a decision is made at the level of the City Council," Rayfield said.

Hill House's juvenile facility on Beveridge Street opened in January. Complaints against Hill House were brought to the City Council after the young adults facility on Cherry Street was opened in May.

James Hewette, principal spokesman for Hill House's opponents, has objected to the establishment of the facilities in a residential neighborhood and to what he believes to be a concentration of such programs in Carbondale.

Hewette, who lives near the Cherry Street house, has also complained of overcrowding, inadequate parking, immorality and loud noise.

Reitman has contended that Hill House's rules place residents under stricter control than that found in the rooming houses common to the area and that state auditing procedures insure proper use of tax money.

S-Center reduces power use while workmen repair cable

By Dan Hofmann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Student Center will operate without escalators and will restrict the use of lights and air conditioning for the next week to 10 days while workmen repair a power cable which failed Monday afternoon.

Jim Sheppard, assistant director of the Student Center, said a power failure occurred at about 4 p.m. He said the Center's auxiliary power generator came on, but provided only enough power for emergency lighting and a few critical services. "We were forced to close the building at 7 p.m.," said Sheppard.

He explained the emergency lighting wasn't sufficient to enable people to see.

Jim Filla, an electrical engineer for the Physical Plant, said a failure was located in a primary cable under the street. The cable connects the Physical Plant and the Student Center.

He said two-thirds power was restored to the Student Center by tapping a cable which supplies power to Thompson Point, Small Group Housing and the Agriculture Building. He said the tap was completed at about 11 p.m. Monday night.

Scientists debate possible life forms as Viking arm scoops Martian soil

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—If there's life on Mars, it is probably a microscopic variety equipped with biological pumps to extract liquid from the very dry atmosphere. Viking 1's head scientist said Tuesday.

Dr. Gerald Soffen expressed optimism that Viking 1 would find life when it scoops up a sample of the Red Planet's desert surface Wednesday.

"I'm extremely encouraged with the discovery of nitrogen," Soffen said. "That changes it all for me."

After months and months of arguing among the Viking scientists over the presence and amount of nitrogen, we find ourselves swimming in nitrogen," Soffen said.

Now that scientists think life could exist on Mars, they've begun speculating on what Martian life would look like.

"None of us ever thought there were going to be forests on Mars," Soffen said.

He said that since Mars has been dry for eons, creatures on Mars would have to have adapted to the relative dryness by developing pumps to draw water from the atmosphere.

"Martian critters have had billions of years to adapt," he said.

If there are Martians, Soffen said, they would almost certainly be in the form of microbes, organisms too small to be seen by the human eye.

By noon Wednesday, PDT, scientists will know whether the lander's arm obeyed the command to venture to the surface and scoop up the soil.

Though data will be coming back daily from the various experiments, it will probably be the first week of August before any answer can be given to the age-old question, is there life on Mars?

Generation gap turns the tables

By Matt Coulter
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

I pulled my microwave meatloaf meal from the brand new 1988 model oven, carried it over to the kitchen table and sat down to eat dinner with my fifteen-year-old son, Bob.

Bob was eating early tonight so he could go out to a party. He finished the last bite of his third microwave dinner.

"Where's the party tonight, Bob?" I asked in between chews on the leathery hunk of soy-meat.

"It's over at Todd Henderson's house. I should be home about three o'clock, unless it's really hopping." He tossed the empty tray into the trash compactor. I asked Bob if he wanted money for some beer.

"Are you kidding? The only people that drink that alcohol stuff are all your age," he snapped back.

Well, I'm only 34—but I guess that's old in 1988 America. But maybe Bob could score me some dope at the party?

"Bob, will there be any drugs there?"

"For sure. Todd wouldn't have a party without drugs. Last time he had LSD, MDA, Gormlie, Tri-ups, marijuana—you name it," he answered unexcitedly.

I took out my wallet and pulled out a $50 bill, then handed it to my son.

"Get me some acid, alright?"

Bob plucked the bill from my hand. "Sure."

I reached over and ran my hand through his hair.

"Bob, there isn't going to be any of that bisexual stuff going on, is there? I really don't think you should go to parties like that."

He backed away two steps, beyond my reach.

"Well, Dad, a lot of people are into that these days so there might be some of it going on. I can't really stop it, even if I wanted to."

"Well, I hope you're not doing it. It's just not right." I reached into my pocket and fished out a pack of Acapulco Gold's.

"Dad, didn't your parents hassle you about pot?"

I lit a joint and took in a nice, deep hit. "Yeah, all the time. But that was different."

"How was it different?" Bob persisted.

My pulse quickened as I groped for an answer I didn't have.

"Society accepted and legitimated marijuana use, so we must have been right about it." I knew this would be a weak argument, and Bob caught it right away.

"But suppose society learns to accept bisexuality?"

Now I was stuck. "Bob, what could anyone get out of bisexuality anyway? I'll never be able to understand that."

Bob looked disgusted. "Dad, if you try it once maybe you'd find out it's not all that bad. Maybe you'd even enjoy it."

I fought to keep control of myself. "Bob, just because a bunch of people your age engage in bisexual practices doesn't make it right. Can't you understand that? You'll never get me to do it!"

Bob started to turn away. "Well, I just hope my generation grows up to be more open-minded than yours is."

"Bob, if I find out you're involved with that bisexual stuff I'll kick you out of the house. Understand me?" I wasn't fighting to keep control now.

"Yeah, but I don't think YOU do, dad."

Bob headed upstairs to change for the party. I moved to the living room and sat in front of the sensurround television screen to absorb the news. I lit up another joint.

"What's this world coming to, anyway?"

Open campus lake to nude swimmers

By Scott Caldwell
Daily Egyptian News Editor

Why is it that with all the controversy over nude swimming in Cedar Lake the only remedy is to condemn it and favor a law against it?

It seems the city council and the righteous citizens are trying to enforce their Bible-belt morality on us. Just because the sight of nude bodies upsets or excites them doesn't give them the right to undermine our pursuit of happiness.

Viewpoint

The sight of nude bodies shouldn't upset anyone if they are mature enough to live with themselves.

In a paper delivered to the Midwest Sociological Society in 1964, Martin S. Weinberg said that "nudism and sexuality are unrelated and there is nothing shameful about exposing the human body."

He further elaborated by saying that "the abandonment of clothes can lead to a feeling of freedom and natural pleasure."

He concluded with the thought that "nude activities, especially full bodily exposure to the sun, leads to a feeling of physical, mental and spiritual well-being."

The Bible-belt notwithstanding there are many people in this town with a wide divergence of ideas on how life should be lived. But what's wrong with the old standby of live and let live?

The University is supposed to train us for life in the real world and what better training is there besides learning to live with your fellow man?

In accordance with this idea, I propose that the beach of Lake-on-the-Campus be made available for nude swimming.

If this is asking for too much, why not build a small nude beach in one of the Lake-on-the-Campus coves. If the University posted a "No lifeguards on duty. Swim at your own risk" sign, there won't be upkeep cost for the University to worry its fiscal mind about.

Since it appears most of the swimmers at Cedar Lake are SIU students and University ID's are required for entry into Lake-on-the-Campus, why don't we solve all the hassle with a simple student referendum?

Now would be a good time for the student government to show that it is concerned about the students, rather than their paychecks, and they could be very instrumental in pushing a referendum through allowing nude swimming.

Who knows, maybe the University could even make some money by selling passes to the nude beach to townspeople that are mature enough to enjoy themselves peacefully?

Letters

Integration editorial shows prejudice

To the Daily Egyptian:

Mr. Robert Wren's viewpoint on racially-biased ill feeling in Chicago seems to indicate that the author felt somehow qualified to comment on various situations as a neutral and objective observer. It didn't take long for Mr. Wren to reveal his own racial affiliation and biases.

Mr. Wren stated that it was short-sighted to refer to a particular columnist as "racist". It is hard to see how anyone can grow up being the product of American society and not be a racist to some degree. It is a problem we all must learn to extinguish on an individual basis.

A racist, Mr. Wren, is someone who refers to wandering groups of rock-throwing white Nazi sympathizing criminals as "demonstrators" and purported black hustlers as "roving gangs of black looters", as you did.

And referring to "blacks who don't obey the law", if you, Mr. Wren, are skilled at identifying members of a particular element, why not call the police and give them specific facts and names of criminals so that you and other law-abiding people can live in peace of mind?

Although many whites enjoy giving examples of crimes supposedly committed by blacks, how many whites can actually say that they were really the victims of such crimes? A "fair" solution is not one which denies people access to housing on the basis of mythology and rumor.

Have a little Heart

To the Daily Egyptian:

I was very unsatisfied with Mr. Coulter's review of last Wednesday's Mississippi River Festival. In his very engrossed description of the Doobie Brothers, he failed to even mention the back-up band, Heart.

Even though they have been around for a very short while, Heart has several hit songs and they gave an excellent concert.

I like to think that Mr. Coulter got caught in the traffic jam and missed Heart for I am sure he could have thought something either good or bad about a back-up band in his review.

Christopher Debosek
Junior
Communication Graphics-Design

To say that "experts" predict that most homicides will occur in areas of typically black population, while ignoring other factors such as availability of decent housing, public services, population density, adequate schools, and employment and recreational opportunities in "problem" areas, to equate crime with black is a racist logic.

It is ironic to see that working class whites and blacks share the same aspirations for a nice home, an education for their children, and adequate shopping facilities and health care, while whites continue in the delusion that blacks want only to destroy neighborhoods instead of sharing in their benefits.

Mr. Wren, your lack of sympathy to the historically provable fact that more blacks have been the victims of white crime in America than whites can ever be of black crime, leads you to the conclusion that blacks are so bad that they give off some kind of poison which has the power to kill trees and leave "urban blight" in their place.

Ban cheap cigars?

To the Daily Egyptian:

As the nude swimming controversy at Cedar Lake continues, many are quick to point out the unfairness of Carbondale City Manager Carroll Fry's memorandum that enforces an indecent exposure ordinance, but overlooks other illegalities such as oversized outboard motors and, as a recent Daily Egyptian letter pointed out, alcoholic beverages in Evergreen Park.

This is what is known as "selective enforcement," for Fry, apparently, is not bothered by boats and booze, but is personally repulsed by nudity (obviously preferring swimming suits to birthday suits). Fry is eager to forbid nude swimming because it is an activity that he chooses to not do himself, so is unaffected by his own edict. I doubt he would enforce an ordinance banning cheap cigars.

Nydia Barone, Ananda Marga teacher trainee (center), conducts a group session on spiritual education during the seminar.

Seminar explains pre-school ideals

By Tim Powers
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Ananda Marga Sunrise Pre-School in Anna held an alternative educational seminar to help explain to people of the Anna-Jonesboro area the programs the school is using in pre-school child development and to alleviate any fears the community might have that the pre-school attempts to convert the children to a strange mystical Indian religion.

The teachers at the seminar, held Saturday, explained that the Ananda Marga philosophy was established by P. R. Sakar, an Indian monk, in 1955. One of the basic tenets of the philosophy is that through certain meditative techniques, such as yoga or even social work, self realization (the realizing of one's full potential) can be achieved. This, the Ananda Marga teachers believe, enables them to be more sensitive to the wants and needs of others, especially children.

The seminar went on to explain, largely through Kay Hamilton, who is helping train teachers for other Ananda Marga schools, that the Ananda pre-school uses a blend of the Montessori and Steiner approaches to elementary education. In the Montessori method (founded by Maria Montessori in the early 1900's) the child is considered a self activated learner working in a stage environment set up by the teacher to encourage self education. The Steiner method (developed by Rudolph Steiner also in the early 1900's) focuses the child's energy in creative and aesthetic areas (such as art or music) to help develop the child's creative imagination and coordination.

The teachers at the seminar emphasized that their goal is to provide a badly needed community service, not a religious indoctrination program.

A student of the Ananda Marga Sunrise pre-school plays in a sandbox during the seminar. Instead of sand, the pre-school uses corn meal.

Vicki Jacobs, Ananda Marga teacher trainee (standing), watches seminar participants during a color experience workshop. The group was tested on their reactions to different colors.

John Sweazy stacks blocks blindfolded during an experiment at the seminar. Also participating in the seminar are Doreen Nachreiner; Hal Morpurgo, monitor; and Sheleigh Witthoft.

Hal and Jane Morpurgo, monitors for the group games portion of the seminar, discuss the participants reactions to the block experiment.

Howlett claims education as No. 1 priority

By Eric White
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Illinois gubernatorial candidate Michael J. Howlett said Tuesday at SIU that education will have "No. 1 priority" if he is elected in November.

Speaking before an audience comprised primarily of teachers at the Taft Institute on Government, Howlett said he would cut back spending in "any other area" if necessary, to maintain funding for education.

Howlett, the Democratic candidate, also said he "intends to draw on the resources of the universities as much as possible."

"We can make better use of education for economic development," Howlett said, adding that it would be better to draw on the talent in Illinois universities than to bring in administrators from outside the state.

For example on a recent trip to Champaign, "I was shocked to find experts on coal are not getting research funds from the state and federal governments," Howlett said. He noted that the development of Illinois coal would mean economic expansion for Southern Illinois.

Howlett also said he has created a nonpartisan commission to create a "talent bank of women" for his administration.

Howlett reiterated a pledge he made in Marion last week to appoint a nonpolitical professional director of Business and Economic Development as part of a program to revitalize the economy of Southern Illinois. The director would be a citizen of Illinois, he said.

Howlett promised to go after more federal funds. "Illinois is 50th among the states in per capita federal grants received," Howlett said. "Illinois receives about 72 cents for every dollar it sends out."

Howlett said he will soon address himself to the concerns of farmers. He pledged to appoint "the best director of agriculture possible" and said he supports the building of a new lock on the Mississippi River at Alton, "to keep farm products moving."

The state should also help insure, an adequate supply of railroad cars and improve highways and bridges for the same reason, Howlett said. "I support completion of a highway to St. Louis. Then we can get some Missouri money over here for recreation," Howlett said.

Howlett, who was completing a nine-day tour through 38 Southern Illinois counties, said he found gun control is a major issue in the area.

Except for extending Illinois' ban on cheap handguns to the federal level, Howlett said he does not favor new controls. Instead, he favors mandatory sentences for those convicted of using guns in the commission of a crime and for those found carrying concealed weapons.

Howlett listed several instances in which he favors the death penalty, including mass murder, murder for hire and murder of prison guards.

He said he believes the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision makes it possible to draw up a law imposing capital punishment in those circumstances.

Efficient administration, Howlett said, can prevent a tax increase during the next two years.

At the end of his twelve years as auditor, there were fewer employees than when he began, Howlett said. He added that he has cut the payroll in the Secretary of State's Office by 12 per cent.

Howlett said the Illinois budget has grown twice as fast as the federal government's and eight times as fast as the rate of inflation.

Shocking buttons, obnoxious bells: suggestions for library cause action

By Janice Brenneisen
Student Writer

"Why do we get shocked when we touch the elevator buttons?" "The closing bells are obnoxious." "Please fix the Xerox machines." These are representative of notes put in the Morris Library Suggestion box, according to Roland Person, assistant reference librarian at the Undergraduate Library.

Person has responded to approximately 155 notes since the suggestion box was installed in October 1973. He records his responses in a book which is available to the public at the undergraduate desk.

Person facetiously suggested wearing rubber gloves to avoid shocks from the elevator buttons. The shocks are a natural thing caused by static electricity.

As far as the closing bells, Person agreed that they are quite annoying, contacted the people in charge and as a result, the bells will not ring as long as they had previously.

One of the major changes that has taken place because of the box is that a repairman will now be on duty regularly to service the Xerox machines. There were several complaints in the box about consistently "out of order" machines.

A student-faculty committee is studying the possibility of a new circulation system as a result of a complaint put in the box, according to Person. The note stated the problem of locating a book which has been checked out by a faculty member. The new system would pertain to faculty as well as students, Person said.

After receiving the notes, Person said he sorts out the profane and illogical ones. "Most there is a den of sexual manifestation located in the lower pumprooms?" from the reasonable ones like those for additional library materials. He then follows up on these by talking with the heads of the departments involved and discussing the possibility of fulfilling the requests.

One of the most popular complaints was one concerning regulation of the heat in the building. Person said he contacted the Physical Plant about the heat problem and was told that to rectify this would mean remodeling at a cost of a quarter of a million dollars.

Person said he likes to think that the box serves as a source of information rather than just a place to register complaints. He said in answering some comments he refers the person to another authority for further information.

Person said that the notes which cannot be interpreted in any other way but jokingly, he tries to respond to with equally amusing answers.

One of the main purposes of the library is service, Person said. He hopes more people will use the suggestion box so Morris Library can serve SIU better.

Mitchell Museum has show, two artists present works

The work of artists David Clarke and Brent Collins is currently being presented at the Mitchell Museum in Mt. Vernon until Aug. 29.

The current show includes 70 paintings and four stained glass entries by Clarke, a native of Dublin, Ireland now residing in Corpus Christi, Texas; Collins will exhibit nine marble and limestone sculptures. He is from Oakland, Illinois.

Clarke has participated in many one-man and several group artist shows in Ireland, Canada and France. His first American showing was at the Paner Museum Art Gallery on this campus in February of this year. His work is found in many private collections in Ireland, England and the United States and is also included in such public collections as IBM and SIU. This past spring, Clarke taught a special class on "The Art of Stained Glass" here.

Collins graduated from Illinois State University and has participated in numerous one-man and group exhibitions. He is currently exhibiting two of his marble pieces in the Individual Exhibit at the Illinois State Museum in Springfield, and other works of his can be found at Lake Land College, Danville Community College, the American Music Conservatory in Chicago, and in several private collections.

Three men charged with theft

Three Chicago men were arrested early Saturday morning and charged with disorderly conduct by Carbondale police and charged with theft under $150 and criminal damage to property by SIU security police.

Security police said John Brumgart, 20, James R. Murphy, 20, and Albert J. Martin, 19, removed three fire extinguishers from lot no. 112, a campus parking garage, late Friday night. The subjects then allegedly used the extinguishers to spray pedestrians on Illinois Avenue in front of Merlin's and Das Fass.

The three were taken to the Security Office and were released on $100 bond. They are scheduled to appear in court August 25 at 10:00 a.m.

Richman hits press, politics in seminar speech

By Scott Singleton
Student Writer

The man responsible for setting up the criminal docket for the Jackson County Circuit Court said Tuesday that he is not looking forward to Illinois' reinstatement of the death penalty.

Circuit Judge Richard Richman, speaking before a session of the Taft Institute of Government Seminar, would not express his opinion on the recent Supreme Court decision on capital punishment, but did say that in the last five years there have been longer and more sentences imposed and "the correlation between crime and punishment is not there."

"Most persons who commit crimes don't believe they are going to get caught, so they are really not deterred," Richman said.

Study looks at jurors' views, professor sites first findings

By Tom Chesser
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An SIU psychology professor who sees a growing need for stronger ties between the areas of law and the social sciences has reached tentative conclusions on how Jackson County jurors view the courts.

From his on-going research Eugene Ringette has empirically measured that members of juries view judges with a high level of trust and respect; see the states attorney and public defender as equal antagonists and view the defendants as somewhat unequal to themselves as jurors. Jurors in the study were selected from more than 300 serving in Jackson County in the last two years.

Ringette said the jurors were all interviewed and asked to fill out a questionnaire voluntarily only after the trials were over. He said that the jurors basically see the judges and attorneys in one class, "members of the courts," and see themselves and the defendant as outsiders or "one-timers."

Ringette said he feels that this study is very unique in that it studies the trial process through the jurors' eyes in the court setting. He said he knows of no other study of this kind being done and said he plans on doing the same study of jurors in an urban area like St. Louis.

Ringette said his study to point has basically validated common sense. He has empirically measured the fact that juries see members of the court, themselves and the

Although he said he is harsher on those who commit violent crimes and those who use guns, Richman said he is not in favor of stricter gun control legislation. "It's not going to help to have more laws until we enforce the present laws," he said.

Richman said politics will never be eliminated in the appointment of judges. "Lawyers are by nature extremely social beings and tend to identify rather early with a political party."

He said the American public cannot expect a judge who is disinterested in politics to be a good judge.

Although he does not favor a mandatory retirement age for judges, Richman said there should be some method of telling a judge to get off the bench when he is no longer effective. "I know judges who are in their 60's who should retire. With this beautiful pension plan, I don't know why they don't retire."

"Too many lawyers become judges because they want the pension and security," he said.

Richman said many judges invite disrespect. "There are many judges I know who really think they own that courtroom." Pointing to some Chicago judges who work three hour days, Richman said judges should work at least seven hours a day, "it's good for the soul."

He said the bad image lawyers have acquired from the Watergate affair is not fair. "We had people who had gone to law school and who were in the bar, but they never acted like lawyers, they were politicians," Richman declared.

Richman said the courts are not getting the public support they need and that he wishes more people would come and observe the courts in action. "I don't object to press coverage but I do object to lack of coverage. After all, judges are merely another part of government."

He said the press should go to court and see what is going on, not just during spectacular trials, but during the day to day operations of the court.

In commenting on press claims of judicial censorship, Richman said "They always cry about censorship but they are the biggest censors around. They don't give a damn about the individual's rights, they only want to sell the newspapers."

He also stated that the press is too often concerned with the grisly details of a crime, claiming it is the public's right to know. "Is it the public's right to know all the obscene details? How much difference does it make whether a person is stabbed 7 times or 142 times?" Richman said.

Summer Session, 1976 Final Examination Schedule

Because of the limited number of examination periods available, no departmental examination times are scheduled for the Summer. The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Some questions might develop for which answers can be provided at this time.

1. Classes that meet longer than one hour on Tuesday and Thursday, such as two semester hour classes, should use the examination period established for the earlier of the hours. (For example, a class meeting from 7:30 to 9:00 on Tuesday and Thursday would hold its examination at 2:00 Wednesday, August 4.) This applies also to non-lecture type courses such as laboratory or seminar type courses.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examinations in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide sufficient notice for all.

The following points are also pertinent relative to the final examination schedule:

1. A student who finds he has more than three examinations on one day may petition, and a student who has two examinations scheduled at one time should petition his academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period does not mean that a student may decide to miss his scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for a student whose petition has been approved by his dean.

2. A student who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given a student who misses a final examination and is not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

1. One credit hour courses, and classes scheduled for meeting dates less than the full 8-week session have their examinations during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the two formal final examination days.

2. Other classes (those scheduled for full 8-week session)

Counselors help reduce abortion dilemma

Editor's note: This is the third in a series on abortion. In it a problem pregnancy counselor discusses her job and the kinds of problems she deals with. Future installments will examine abortion clinics and services and women who have decided not to have an abortion.

By Mary E. Gardner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Whether a woman should have an abortion is "usually a kind of sticky decision" for her, Bobbie Piper, supervisor of the problem pregnancy counseling program in Carbondale, said.

Counselors are available to make sure a woman "touches all bases" and is aware of all her alternatives before deciding what she wants to do about her pregnancy, whether it be to have an abortion or have the baby, Piper said.

"Most of the women have pretty much made the decision before they go to the counselors," she said. They want some help in making the decision and, more important, in implementing the decision once it is made, she added.

If a woman responds favorably to abortion alternatives, of putting the child up for adoption or keeping the baby, the counselors follow up in this area, Piper said.

"We give them information and they get information from us," said Piper. The counselors do not make the decisions for the women, she said.

Most of the women who are counseled in Carbondale adapt to the counselors' feeling that they should consider all the aspects and not jump into it, Piper said. There are some women, however, who "are really put out at having to go through counseling. They feel they have made up their mind and want only to know where to go and what it is going to cost."

One of the first steps in problem pregnancy counseling is to find out the concerns of each particular woman. Her religious views, concern about friends and family, her health and, in general, what she thinks about her pregnancy, Piper said.

Reasons women most often give for considering abortions "are that they are not mature enough, not financially stable or would not be able to finish school if they had a baby. Some older women perhaps cannot cope with a new baby or sometimes they have had a previous baby with birth defects and are afraid to do through it again, Piper said.

"Every woman is an individual case with individual circumstances," Piper said. When she began problem pregnancy counseling three years ago, she thought there would be a limited number of cases and circumstances, but Piper says she has discovered that each is really different.

Students used for pregnancy counseling at Women's Center

Problem pregnancy counselors working out of the Women's Center in Carbondale have nearly all been practicum students earning credit for their work, Bobbie Piper, supervisor of the problem pregnancy counseling, said.

They are mostly rehabilitation students and all of the current counselors are getting credit for their work in a school course and are under the supervision of a qualified faculty member, Piper said.

Many of the counselors have had some background in family planning and are concerned about the general problems of sexuality and the need for counseling and education in this area, she said.

For re-hab students it is one of the two areas oriented in this direction (the other is Human Sexuality Services), she said. One runs into sexual problems in any type of counseling, Piper said.

Conversations between the problem pregnancy counselors and women are strictly confidential and no records of names are kept, Piper

"There are as many reasons as there are people," Piper said.

We tell them what to expect in terms of the physical procedures that will be used, Piper said. It is going to hurt some, it is not going to be completely comfortable; most women report that it does not last long, she continued.

They will be given some kind of relief for pain, Piper said.

The early abortions will be the vacuum aspiration method and the actual procedure takes about 20 minutes, Piper said. They are done by a qualified doctor trained in gynecology, she continued.

The mouth of the uterus is dilated in increasing increments and when the dilation is about the size of a pencil the aspirator is used to vacuum the fetus out of the uterus, Piper said.

After that, the woman is taken to the recovery room to rest where a nurse checks to make sure she is not bleeding excessively, she said.

A counselor will talk with the woman as soon as the woman feels okay, usually about an hour after the surgery, she said. This counseling is primarily to give the woman birth control information and to make sure she is having "no problems," Piper said.

There is an effort by the problem pregnancy counselors to do post surgical counseling, but most women do not want to return for this, Piper said. About one-fourth make brief telephone calls to say "it's over and I am glad" and that is usually the end of it, Piper said. "The door is always open," she added.

Piper said she has never seen a woman who was completely traumatized by the entire idea of having an abortion. Some women have been in a state where lives were disordered in general and an abortion might have some effect, good or bad, on the general course of their lives.

If someone is depressed and having problems, decision making in general is a more difficult process, Piper said. In these cases women often get into second trimester abortions because they fail to make any decision before that time, she said.

In some cases, the women have said they were not going to tell the man involved, Piper said. She speculated that the reason for this could be that their relationships were not really very close and the women felt they would get some "flack" from the men.

Sherry Garcia, counselor at The Ladies Center, a St. Louis abortion clinic, said quite a few very young women show up with their mothers who appear to be pushing their daughters into having an abortion. She said, many times in cases such as these, the mother refuses to believe "it will happen again" and does not want her daughter to have access to birth control methods or information.

In Carbondale, many young women see the problem pregnancy counselors with both parents, Piper said, and she has never "seen a parent really pushing" a daughter into having an abortion.

"One thing that impresses me is that there has been a change in the attitude of the country generally. I have talked to persons who have had an abortion when they were illegal. The psychological effects of the abortion combined with doing something illegal was very strong," Piper said.

"Making them legal has changed the peoples' attitudes generally so that I think women are less likely to feel that this is a stigma that puts them outside the social establishment. I see this as being very beneficial for the woman who has to make the decision," she said. "I nearly always talk with the woman about birth control during the interview," Piper said.

Some women consider abortion as almost a means of birth control, Piper said. In cases such as these, Piper said she does not feel she has made her point as a counselor. "Abortion is not the type of elective procedure you can go through like having your teeth filled or your hair cut," she said.

U.S. Olympic chief calls Wilkins "popoff"

MONTREAL (AP)—The president of the U.S. Olympic Committee called America's discus gold medalist, Mac Wilkins, "a grandstander and a popoff" this week, hitting back at critics of the American Olympic effort.

"It's like hating your parents," Philip O. Krumm of Kenosha, Wis., told The Associated Press.

The USOC executive claimed most Americans were upset by Wilkins' antics on the field and at the victory ceremonies and at the comments he made at the post-competition press conference at the Olympic Stadium.

Wilkins, a tall, bearded free spirit from San Jose, Calif., joshed with his competitors and carried on a running flirtation with the crowd during his six throws, one of which went 221 feet, 5 inches for the gold medal.

When East Germany's Wolfgang Schmidt unleashed a toss that beat out Wilkins' teammate, John Powell, for the silver medal, Wilkins threw a bear hug around the German and lifted him high in the air. It appeared to be a slap at Powell, with whom Wilkins has had a long feud.

On the victory stand, Wilkins broke into a wide smile during the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Asked at the press conference why he had smiled, the big University of Oregon graduate gave a profane explanation which drew hearty laughs. The reply caused some consternation among interpreters.

Then Wilkins launched into another attack on the U.S. Olympic Committee, saying, "I am embarrassed to be associated with people like that."

Earlier he told reporters, "I hope East Germany wins all the medals here. It would shake our people up. I hate inefficiency."

Wilkins was asked if he felt he had won the gold medal for himself or for the United States.

"For myself," he said. "I worked for it. The United States can share in it if they wish but they had no part in winning it."

It was this comment that riled Krumm.

"Wilkins is the No. 1 grandstander," the USOC chief said. "He is a publicity hound of the first order, a 90-day wonder. Without Olympic funds and help, he wouldn't be here and have that medal."

"He is one of those who lean on us for money and then show no appreciation. But it's a minor group. We have a letter from the gymnastic team thanking us for what we've done."

Asked if disciplinary action may be taken against Wilkins, Krumm replied: "I don't think so. We have learned to put up with jerks like that."

Wilkins' criticism, which he has promised to elaborate on later at another formal press conference, followed expressions of discontent by his close friend, shot putter Al Feuerbach, shot putter Goerge Woods and javelin bronze medalist Kate Schmidt.

"The malcontents constitute a very small minority of our team," Krumm said. "Over-all the spirit of the team is high, the morale good. Most American athletes feel it is a privilege and an honor to represent their country in these Games."

Softballers win two games

Two recent wins by the women's intramural softball team has pushed its record to one game shy of an even slate.

Monday night SIU whipped the Murphysboro Hornets, 17-8 in a revenge-minded contest. Earlier in the season SIU was blanked by the Hornets, 10-0.

Last week Southern started its recent two-game streak with a 17-16 squeaker over Boskydell. The two victories have temporarily rested SIU's slate at 3-4.

Southern took the lead from the Hornets Monday night after the third frame, when they assumed a 7-6 margin.

After three runs in the fifth, a seven run sixth frame killed off the Hornets' chance for a comeback. A triple by Carol McElhiney and doubles by Terry Haas and Jo Licata provided the muscle power for Southern.

Winning pitcher of the Murphysboro game was Debra Mibb. She pitched the entire seven innings.

It took two pitchers and two extra innings for Southern to nail down the Boskydell victory.

In the ninth inning, with the scored tied 16-16, Southern's Licata hit a grounder to the Boskydell shortstop. When the shortstop bobbled the ball, Tonya Kempsey scored from third with the winning run.

McElhiney picked up this victory with a relief performance. She took over mound duties from Mibb in the fifth inning. McElhiney allowed two hits, struck out eight, walked five, and allowed three runs.

Southern's biggest productive inning came in the second when a triple by Vicki Kupszak and singles by Dempsey, Licata, and Haas pushed over six tallies.

A batting show was put on by Kupszak. She added two doubles to her triple.

Wynegar's only vice, playing baseball

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Butch Wynegar of the Minnesota Twins doesn't smoke, drink or swear, but he's having the time of his life.

The 20-year-old rookie catcher quietly goes about doing a job that may make him Fred Lynn's successor as American League Rookie of the Year.

Wynegar, who hits from both sides with equal ability, has kept his batting average near the .300 mark most of the season. Despite the daily grind of catching, Wynegar has missed only six games and often is behind the plate in both games of a doubleheader.

"He's the most complete rookie player I've ever managed," said Minnesota skipper Gene Mauch. "Dick Allen had the greatest first year I've ever seen, but that was mostly because of his great hitting."

Wynegar, who was four years old in York, Pa. when Mauch began his managing career, became the youngest player to appear in an All-Star baseball game when he pinch-hit in the 1976 classic at Philadelphia earlier this month.

"I think I enjoyed his time at bat more than he did," said Mauch. "Butch is so unimpressed by himself. He handles all situations and contends well with the publicity."

Wynegar simply loves baseball. He's not interested in the nightly pursuits of many pro athletes and gets 10-12 hours of sleep every night.

"That's right," said veteran Twins catcher Phil Roof. "He's all baseball. I guess he does have a girlfriend, but that's about it."

The 6-foot, 190-pound switchhitter is the best catcher the Twins have had since Earl Battey in the early 1960s.

official said. "If he wants to make a chivalrous gesture like that, then more power to him."

The first score flashed on the board for Mrs. Murdock was 1162 and for Bassham 1160. Then a clerical error was discovered which, when rectified, gave Bassham 1162 also.

Under the rules ties are broken by the scores of the last 10 shots from a kneeling position. In this instance, Bassham had the better marks.

It was a big letdown for the motherly Kansan, who said that she was kept from winning a world championship at Phoenix, Ariz., in 1970 when she was penalized for slow shooting.

"The fault lay with the guy in the pits who pulled targets," she said. "He was slow and I was the one who suffered."

Third midsummer meet set for McAndrew Thursday

The Third Annual Midsummers All-Corners Track Meet is scheduled for Thursday evening at McAndrew Stadium, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

This meet is sponsored by both the Southern Illinois Roadrunners Club and the Men's Physical Education Department.

Anyone regardless of sex or age can enter the meet. Eleven running events are scheduled for competitors and ribbons will be awarded to first, second, and third places, according to age groups.

Events scheduled in order, are: mile run (11 years and older); 440 yard relay (11 and older); 25 yard dash (up to 4 years old); 50 yard dash (up to 10; 100

Ten points were taken away from me arbitrarily. No one would listen to my appeal."

As a woman, America's modern Annie Oakley has found it difficult to gain what she calls just recognition in a traditionally male sport.

Softball tourneys begin action

Both the 12 and 16 inch intramural softball tournaments have entered the second round of competition. Eight teams are left in each tourney.

The six undefeated teams in both tournaments survived first round action.

In the 16 inch tourney, Call Us yard dash (all ages); 2 mile run (13 and older); 440 yard dash (all ages); 880 yard run (9 and older); 220 yard dash (all ages); master's mile (ages 30-39), and the veteran's mile (ages 40 and older).

There is no entry fee, but all participants must register with meet officials. Participants can only enter three events.

Participants will be split up into eleven age groups in both the men and women's divisions.

For further information contact meet director Ronald G. Knowlton, Department of Physical Education for Men, 536-7773.

Woman shooter loses gold at Games

MONTREAL (AP) —Margaret Murdock, first woman ever to win a shooting medal in the Olympic Games, is so nearsighted she can't read the top line of an eye chart.

"Without these thick-lens glasses, I wouldn't have any idea where the target was," the buxom, 33-year-old divorcee from Topeka, Kan., said, shaking off the disappointment of a gold medal that escaped her grasp.

Mrs. Murdock, called "Wac" by her teammates because of her six years in the Women's Army Corps which she left as a captain, was the Olympic champion for the small-bore rifle for a few happy hours.

In a bizarre sequence of reversals in the judging, she apparently won the event, then tied it and finally lost it when a magnifying device determined that one of the bullets fired by her teammate, Lanny Bassham, was less than 1-25th of an inch nearer the center of the target than first believed.

So Bassham, a 29-year-old Army captain from Bedford, Tex., was declared the gold medal winner, with Mrs. Murdock getting the silver.

Bassham was suddenly stricken with chivalry and asked that two gold medals be awarded instead of one. Joe Barry, manager of the U.S. shooting team, took the cause to the international federation with little hope of approval.

"Arbitrary rubbish," Bassham said of the technicalities that gave him the championship. "There should be two Olympic champions. If there are not two gold medals, I hope I can let Margaret share the gold medal with me on the victory stand."

The presentations were to be made later.

"It's up to Bassham," a U.S. Olympic
